City Officials Put 1982 Legislative Agenda on Annapolis Dinner Menu

by Bill Rowland

Greenbelt's top officials presented the city's annual "want list" to its state legislative delegation at a dinner meeting in Annapolis on February 10. This list is the legislative program that the city council hopes to have adopted during the 1982 session of the Maryland General Assembly.

Greenbelt was represented at this meeting by all five city councilmen, along with City Manager James Giese and Administrative Assistant Michael McLaughlin. All four members of the legislative delegation were also present—Senator Edward T. Conroy, and Delegates Joan Pitkin, Gerard Devlin, and Charles Ryan.

The city's representatives put forth eleven topics on which they want General Assembly action. These issues, on which the council had developed its positions during a series of regular meetings and work sessions, were compiled into a booklet for use by the legislators. The following are the topics and the recommendations of the council, as abstracted from the booklet:

School Districts: The council opposes a bill that would change the boundaries of school districts in Prince Georges County to make them the same as the new councilmanic districts. The council's reasons are the same as those involved in the city's recent fight against the boundaries chosen for redistricting. The council also opposes provisions of the bill that would make changes in procedures for election of the county Board of Education. The council position is that it has been satisfied with the present procedures and sees no reason for change.

Antitrust Immunity: The city council wants the legislature to solve possible serious problems raised for the city (and for Maryland's other home-rule cities and counties) by a January ruling of the U.S. Supreme Court. The court decided that home-rule jurisdictions in many states may be sued in Federal courts by private firms which think regulatory actions taken by the jurisdictions are economically discriminatory in violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act.

An example of such regulation by a city or county is the award of a cable television franchise and the control of fees for cable service.

It was previously thought that grant of broad home-rule authority to a city or county by a state gave that city or county the same immunity from antitrust suits as is enjoyed by the states. But the Supreme Court ruled not so: The local jurisdiction is protected from such suits only if the state legislature has specifically authorized the jurisdiction to regulate a particular commercial activity such as cable television.

City & County as Co-equals: The legislators are asked by the council to support a bill that would reestablish the historical co-equality of Maryland's counties and municipalities. Last October the Maryland Court of Appeals ruled that ordinances passed by a home-rule county supersede municipal ordinances on the same subject.

Retirement System Payments: The city asks for legislative help in reducing the impact of a financial blow that stunned the state's municipalities last spring. Cities whose employees are covered by the state's Employees' Retirement System were suddenly given, with no warning and no supporting information, substantial bills for unfunded accrued liabilities in the system. Greenbelt's bill was over $1.5 million, to be paid in annual installments of more than $115,000 over 40 years.

The municipalities want more on-going information from inside the retirement system bureaucracy, and possibly representation on the system's Board of Trustees. They also want assurance that each municipality carries only its fair share of the payments to the retirement fund.

Highway Funding: The city council wants a state increase in highway user revenues, provided that the cities get their equitable shares, that additional state funding is provided for METRO, and that the legislature controls use of state highway funds so the interests of the cities are protected.

Highway Projects: The council wants help in pushing forward the planned major improvements to the Greenbelt Road/Kenilworth Avenue intersection, supports a bill that would prohibit use of state funds on the Inter-County Connector project, and wants to see the Baltimore-Washington Parkway kept in Federal hands. The council also opposes any major widening of the Parkway north of the Beltway or use of the Parkway by trucks.

The council would like noise-reducing improvements (such as special paving) to the Beltway in the Greenbelt vicinity, but objects to unsightly noise barriers such as those being erected in Montgomery County. Also asked for by the council is a state-funded construction program to provide pedestrian and bicycle overpasses or underpasses where interstate and other restricted-access highways bisect a community.

Double Taxation: The legislators are asked to support legislation that would give municipal residents in Maryland an equitable reduction in their county taxes to compensate for county services they do not receive. Greenbelters, for example, pay both city and county taxes for public works, recreational, and police services. The city, in turn, gets almost nothing in the way of county services in these three areas, and receives only a less-than-adequate rebate from the county for public works services provided by the city.

Alternative Money Sources: The city council wants support for a proposed legislative task force that would look for alternative sources of revenue for local governments. This effort is prompted by current budget cuts and shifts in responsibilities from the Federal government to state and local levels.

State Funding of Local Programs: The legislators are asked to help ward off efforts, such as have been made in previous years, that would reduce state funding for Youth Service Bureaus (such as Greenbelt CARES), or for Program Open Space.

Citizens for Greenbelt Annual Meeting To Feature Speakers on Juvenile Justice

Two distinguished Marylanders will discuss juvenile delinquency at the annual meeting of Citizens for Greenbelt on Monday, March 22 at the Greenbelt Library.

Judge David Gray Ross of the Prince Georges County Juvenile Court will discuss the Juvenile Court and Rehabilitation. James S. Dedes, regional supervisor of the Juvenile Services Administration, will give an overview of the Juvenile Services Administration and how it relates to the juvenile justice system in the county. The two speeches will be coordinated to give an overview of treatment of juvenile delinquency. Judge Ross has been a member of the House of Delegates, having served from 1970 to 1978, when he was appointed a judge of the Seventh Judicial Circuit of Maryland. President Carter appointed him to the National Advisory Committee on Juvenile Justice and Delinquency for a four year term in June, 1980. He has also had several years of part-time legal teaching at the American University, Bowie State College, and the Prince Georges Community College, and in addition has served on the Board of Trustees of the Community College. In 1977 he received the Distinguished Citizenship Award given by the Governor of Maryland for work in the area of Juvenile Justice, and served for two years on the Gov-

by Paula Lipman

Eugene O'Neill's powerful "Moon for the Misbegotten" opens March 5 and 6 at the Greenbelt Cultural Arts Center, Utopia Theater. Following the performance a gala wine and cheese celebration will be held on opening night, March 5. The audience will have the opportunity to socialize and meet the cast and stage crew. Curtain time is 8:15 p.m.

O'Neill, a prolific writer, is considered the "father of American drama." Many of his plays, now considered classics, were sensations on Broadway. "Moon for the Misbegotten" made a hit on Broadway in 1974.

The play offers a good mix of emotion, humor, romance, and realism. The language is colorful in the "old Irish tradition."

Farmer Phil Hogan (Charles K. Bortell), irascible, boisterous and hard-drinking, is scheming to marry off his daughter Josie to the well-heeled actor James Tyrone, Jr. His daughter calls him "wicked as an old tick" and "crooked as a corkscrew." Josie (Angela Schreiber) is tall, strong, yet attractive and is outwardly brazen and aggressive. James Tyrone, Jr. (Joe Glenn) is a sensitive, sentimental Broadway actor who frequents the Hogan farm. Konrad Herling makes his debut as T. Stedman Harder, a foolish, bumbling oil millionaire, who enjoys playing country gentleman.

For information call 474-7763, 345-3516 or 345-4487.

Marketing Major Joins Ad Staff

Taking over a new post which he is creating with the News Review is a University of Maryland marketing major, Harold Gelkopf. As the paper's first advertising representative, Gelkopf handled promotion and sales of the backpage coupon feature by local merchants in this week's issue.

A native of Fairlawn, N.J., Gelkopf currently resides in Springhill Lake while he pursues his studies at the University. Like some of the journalism interns who have worked on the News Review staff previously, he hopes that his experience with the News Review will help him to advance in his chosen career field.

Ultimately he hopes for a position in industrial sales but enjoys promotion and advertising of all kinds. Dealing with people in a sales manner will help him, he feels, to learn the advertising business.

GDCC Seeking Candidates for Central Comm.

The Greenbelt Democratic Coordinating Committee (GDCC) has been notified of a vacancy created by the recent resignation of James Herl from the Prince Georges County Democratic Central Committee. Since Herl was a representative on the Central Committee from the 24th legislative district which includes Greenbelt, GDCC is interested in making a recommendation for a qualified Greenbelt candidate to fill the vacancy.

Anyone interested in receiving the support and endorsement of GDCC should send a resume or relevant background information to GDCC, care of Richard J. Castaldi, 11-V Ridge Road, Greenbelt MD 20770.

The vacancy will be filled by March 28 after the Democratic Central Committee conducts public hearings to consider qualified candidates.

Bake Sale

Greenbelt Cultural Arts Center will hold its third (1982) monthly fund raising bake sale Saturday, March 6 outside on the mall in front of the Utopia Theater from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Donors of baked goods for the sale will receive complimentary tickets to be used for any event at the theater. All home made baked goods are welcome. For information call 345-4487.

Training Program

The Central Maryland Chapter and the Metropolitan Washington Chapter of CAI—the Community Associations Institute—are sponsoring a Leadership Training Program (LTP) for condominium, homeowner, and cooperative association boards of directors and committee chairmen. The program will consist of three segments to be held on Saturday, March 6, Thursday evening, March 11, and Saturday, March 13 at the Holiday Inn Capital Beltway in College Park. There is a fee.

For detailed program and registration information, contact the Central Maryland Chapter, 345-6484 (evenings), 7808 Hanover Parkway, No. 201, Greenbelt.

Baltimore Symphony Returns to Greenbelt

The Baltimore Symphony Orchestra is scheduled to perform at Eleanor Roosevelt High School on Wednesday evening, June 2. The Greenbelt Cultural Arts Center is sponsor of the event.

William Henry Curry will conduct the orchestra. The program will offer Wagner's Overture to Die Meistersinger; Mozart's Oboe Concerto in C Major (K314); and Rachmaninoff's 3rd Symphony.

Ticket prices and how and where they may be purchased will be announced shortly.

Greenbelters will remember the highly successful Baltimore Symphony Concert last year and that the affair was practically a sell-out. Mark the date in your calendar.

CORRECTION

Last week's notice of the Maryland energy assistance program listed an incorrect telephone number. The correct number is 699-2662.

The program, designed to assist low income individuals with their heating bills, will expire at the end of March, 1982. Anyone who believes he is eligible for aid through Prince Georges County should call immediately.

An Appeal to Our Readers

The News Review, for 44 years, has depended on the young people of our community to deliver the paper to you each week. But Greenbelt is losing its children. The closing last year of North End Elementary School was a strong clue. Tabulations from the 1980 Census are expected to give official confirmation. Even casual observation shows it to be a fact: There just are not as many "kids" living in our homes and playing in our neighborhoods as there used to be.

We at the News Review have been finding it more and more difficult to keep permanent regular carriers and reliable "substitute" carriers on our delivery routes. We are appealing to you, our readers, to help us meet this new challenge in equally new ways.

For example:

— Could you and your younger child share a delivery route as a chance to do something different together and to introduce your young ones to the ideas of responsibility, helping others, and earning money?

— Are you a vigorous retiree who could work a delivery route into your regular exercise program?

— Do you have a friend (or friendly spouse) with whom the weekly walk around a delivery route could be a social occasion?

— Do you belong to a community group — church, service, youth, social — which could adopt on-going delivery assistance as a worthy community service project?

— Can you help us think creatively about other ways to meet this long-term need?

There's not big money in a News Review delivery route, but there is an important contribution to be offered to our community.

You, our readers, have helped us in the past. Can you help us now?

Thermostat Information To the Editor:

GHI members trying to decide by March 15 whether to have floor or wall thermostats can get some help this weekend. Samples of the heaters and the two types of thermostat will be on display in the GHI board room on Hamilton Place from 10 to 4 on Saturday and from 2 to 6 on Sunday. Members of the board and Audit Committee will be on hand to answer questions. Information will also be available on the additional monthly cost should members opt for the wall thermostat. Also, members may find out when their row is scheduled for heat conversion.

We have checked with Barry Richards, vice-president of the company that markets Chromalox heaters in this area, regarding possible fires resulting from their heaters. He states that several thousand have been installed in Virginia, Maryland, and the District in the last four years. There was one occasion when a householder stuffed the electric cord to a floor lamp into the baseboard heater, presumably to get it out of sight. The Annapolis Fire Marshal ruled that the fire that resulted was due to gross negligence on the part of the householder, not to any defect in the electric baseboard heater. Richards also stated that the thermal protector in the Chromalox heater will shut electric current off almost instantaneously if the unit overheats since it and the heating unit are in one assembly.

PGCC Placement Test

Prospective students applying for admission to Prince Georges Community College are required to take the CGP Exam, a Comparative Guidance and Placement test devised for PGCC. The examination does not detract or enhance a student's eligibility for admission, but measures basic college reading, writing and mathematics skills.

The CGP tests are being offered on March 13 at Eleanor Roosevelt High School. Further information may be obtained from the guidance counselors at Roosevelt.

GHI NOTES

A pre-conversion information meeting will be held from 5 to 6:30 p.m. on March 8 in the GHI Board Room. Pre-conversion meetings will be held every Monday until conversion is completed in the Fall. Members should attend the meeting held the week their unit is scheduled for conversion.

March 15 is the deadline for returning two items to GHI. Frame homeowners should return the Warranty Compliance Questionnaire for Phase I. Members who need a questionnaire may call the Administrative Office (474-5566). Also, anyone who wants wall-mounted thermostats should return the request form. Note that the electricians have determined that rooms with three baseboard heaters (living room in end units) will need two thermostats to handle the wattage. Call the GHI Receptionist, Mary Hurley, (474-6644) for the request form if it is needed.

REHAB NOTICE

ATTENTION FRAME HOMEOWNERS

The contract for Phase I plumbing work is ending. Members who need tile work done in their bathroom because of rehabilitation must notify GHDC (447-2300) by MARCH 15. This is the last chance to have rehab-related tile work done.
